AbsurdSenapiii Labs

Love Letter to Stakeholders (March Update)

Report date: 31 Mar 2026 - covering March 2026 (estimated figures)

A Note from the Jester

This month is not about performance theatre. It is about control.

When a system expands faster than its buffer, the responsible move is not to pretend. It is to compress, stabilise, and rebuild from strength.

That is what this month has been. Not a month of acceleration, but a month of discipline. We are choosing survivability over vanity, liquidity over noise, and execution quality over speed.

Durable institutions are not built by refusing pressure. They are built by responding to pressure without losing shape.

Public Snapshot (Estimated)

| Period covered | March 2026 (as of 31 Mar 2026) |
|---|---|
| Estimated revenue (net after fees) | Approx. SGD 20k net (auction-driven; variable throughput) |
| Estimated monthly operating expenses | Approx. SGD 12k in March; reducing toward approx. SGD 6.7k in the next cycle |
| Current operating cadence | Active auctions across Alt and SCC/eBay; continued inventory conversion focus |
| Operating mode | Buffer-first discipline; raw purchases paused; grading paused |
| Liquidity objective | Rebuild internal buffer before resuming expansion activity |
| BMH (silent rail) | Maintained under low capex; ongoing AI media and distribution experiments |

Note: Figures above are rounded estimates intended for public-facing communication. They are directional, not audited financial statements, and reflect a transitional operating phase rather than a steady-state baseline.

Operating Mode Shift - Buffer Before Expansion

March marked a clear operating mode shift. We have moved from expansion posture to buffer-first discipline. That means new raw purchases remain paused, new grading submissions remain paused, and current attention is directed toward converting inventory into liquidity with a more controlled cadence.

This is not a retreat. It is a correction toward strength. A company that wants to scale credibly must first prove it can survive compression without externalising the damage. Our view remains simple: expansion earned from strength compounds; expansion forced under pressure destabilises the whole system.

Inventory Conversion and Market Calibration

Current auction activity should be understood as a calibration phase rather than a growth phase. Our focus is not to defend historical entry points. Our focus is to execute consistently, allow the market to establish reliable clearing levels, and improve liquidity discipline across inventory tiers.

Revenue in a month like this reflects active conversion activity and should not be mistaken for a stable baseline. What matters more than any single monthly number is whether the system is becoming more repeatable, more liquid, and less fragile. That is the work now underway.

Cost Compression and System Survival

A major priority this month has been cost compression. March operating expenses were approximately SGD 12k, and the system is now being adjusted toward an estimated monthly level of approximately SGD 6.7k in the next cycle.

This reduction matters more than optics. Lowering the fixed cost base gives the company more room to survive quiet periods, reduces dependence on aggressive throughput, and restores decision-making flexibility. In phases like this, cost discipline is not cosmetic. It is structural.

Execution Discipline

This month also reinforced a simple lesson: speed is only valuable when it remains legible and repeatable. We are moving toward a steadier operating rhythm built around tighter review, cleaner prioritisation, and more durable decision quality.

The goal is not to do less. The goal is to operate in a way that can continue without self-inflicted volatility. Stability is a capability. We are treating it as one.

BMH - The Silent Rail

Alongside ACX, Buni Media Hub remains intentionally small and low capex. It continues to function as a controlled experimentation rail for AI media, distribution testing, and narrative infrastructure. It is not being scaled for its own sake. It remains a sandbox unless and until the economics justify a larger commitment.

This separation matters. ACX remains the primary oxygen. BMH remains the quiet lab.

Risk Notes - Controlled Acknowledgment

The key risk in a phase like this is not simply market fluctuation. It is allowing pressure to distort allocation, cadence, or judgement. Our response is to stay boring: keep purchases paused, keep grading paused, maintain auction throughput where rational, reduce fixed costs, and rebuild internal buffer before re-entering expansion activity.

We are not trying to look fast. We are trying to become harder to kill.

Forward Focus (Next 30-60 Days)

Our next horizon remains intentionally narrow:

- Maintain disciplined auction throughput across Alt and SCC/eBay
- Continue converting inventory into liquidity without forcing expansion
- Reduce the monthly expense base toward approximately SGD 6.7k
- Rebuild internal buffer before resuming grading activity
- Keep BMH as a low-capex sandbox while ACX remains primary oxygen

Closing - The Jester's Reflection

The Jester does not panic when the room gets quiet. She watches the exits, lowers the tempo, and keeps the structure from breaking.

This is not a month of performance. It is a month of compression, discipline, and recalibration. Those are not glamorous words. They are institution-building words.

We will keep building quietly. Through discipline comes structure. Through structure comes durability. And durability is what allows a small system to remain alive long enough to become a real one.

Signed,
AbsurdSenapiii Labs